TOLD THAT SHE MAY LIVE.

PEARL ETYNGE ANNOUNCES THAT CHIARA WILL NOT HANG.

Official Information Not Yet Received-The Convicted Woman Weeps When She Hears the News-Mr. Howe Says that the Governor Was Influenced by the Legal Aspect of the Case and Not by Petitions.

Although the official intimation that Chiara Cignarale, instead of hanging by the neck till she is dead, will wear out the rest of her existence in prison walls has not yet been received, Pearl Eytinge called on Chiara last night to tell her that the Governor had put forth the arm of executive elemency to stay the hangman's halter.

An EVENING WORLD man called at the Tombs this morning and saw the woman. She was still in bed, but there was an air of neatness about her and the cell, which was a token of her greater peace of mind.

A neatly folded handkerchief bound her forehead, a nightgown of snowy white had a coquettish line of lace running down the front. She wiped her parched lips occasionally with an embroidered cambric hand-kerchief. Out of the snowy whiteness her dark eyes, black hair and sallow cheeks had a sombre look. sombre look.
She did not seem in much elation of spirits when the reporter spoke to her in Italian, and asked her how she felt. The pain in her stomach and her sore throat seemed to oc-cupy her thoughts more than the commuting cupy her thoughts more than the commuting of her sentence.

"That good lady come last night to tell me the news that I might sleep. I no sleep well for weeks. I think most of my poor child; no father, no mother. God help her."

As soon as official news of the commutation has been received at the Tombs, she will be transported to Blackwell's Island, Warden Osborn says, and live her life and die her death an immate of the Penitentary. Since some ten years it is the law that females guilty of State prison offenses shall be imprisoned in the Penitentiary, and not at Sing Sing.

prisoned in the Penitentiary, and not at Sing Sing.

The reporter saw Mr. Howe at his office. He was resplendent in a suit of navy blue serge, a jockey cap of enamiel and diamonds glittored in his white silk tie, and a summer smile warmed the fringe of white hair that adorned his upper lip. The smile deepened when the reporter alluded to Miss Eytinge's success as a petitioner.

'Gov, Hill is a lawyer, and what has moved him is the opinion of Jack Andrews and the Court of Appeals that this was a case for executive clemency. The petition first handed him had 80,000 names on it. He said to me:

would be there if it was a request for their own execution. They sign without hardly knowing what it is for."

"To-day I shall receive news from Albany. The official intination will come to me." continued Mr. Howe, "and I can tell what it says."

continued Mr. Howe, and I can tell what it says."

Mrs. McAuliffe, the robust and genial matron at the Tombs, who has felt great interest in "Carrie," was in very good humor this morning over the news of the commutation of the woman's death sentence to imprisonment for life. There is a general feeling among the officials that Chiara will mend rapidly now under the consoling relief which the news has aforded her.

"The Judge can write a good letter. If he writes a reply to Purroy it will be a corker. Perhaps Jim Fitzgerald may put in two or three pet phrases. Jim is very sarcastic."

The friends of Purroy continue to say that Police Justice Andrew J. White will be the next man to break away from the County Democracy. Mr. Edward Kearney has already given notice that he will resign. His letter may be made public in a day or two.

Some of the County Democracy leaders have an idea that Purroy and his friends will organize a third machine to act as a tender to Tammany Hall. There are others, however, who prophesy that Purroy will shortly be found in full feather with the wigwam chiefs.

IS COL. QUAY A WELCHER?

HOMER REDPATH'S STORY OF A FARO GAME AT HARRISBURG.

He Tells the Pittaburg "Globe" How the Pennsylvania Political Ajax Dropped 87,000 and Put Up Railroad Shares Which Were Not as Good as Cash-Quay, He Bays, Still Owes Him $4,400.

ISPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD. PITTSBURG, July 23 .- The Globe of this city publishes the following: Homer Redpath, who once ran a fare bank in Harrisburg, tells a little story about Senator Quay which, although well known by nearly all the politicians, has never found its way into the newspapers.

This is Homer's story: "When I was running a faro bank in Harrisburg, Quay and another distinguished politician came to my room one night and asked me to open a game for them. Quay called for $100 worth of for them. Quay called for $100 worth of chips, which I gave him, but he did not pay for them. I said that I could not do business that way. He then took from his pocket a lot of railroad shares, amounting to $20,000, which he said would make me safe. I advanced him chips as he called for them until he was "in a hole" to the amount of $7,000. "When he stopped playing he told me to hold the railroad shares for a few days, and he would settle with me. The next week I went down to Philadelphia, and saw Quay at the Continental Hotel, where he handed me a good-sized roll of bank notes. I put the money in my pocket, thinking that it was several thousand dollars, but when I went to my room and counted it I found he had given me only $500 in twenties.

several thousand dollars, but when I went to my room and counted it I found he had given me only $500 in twenties.

"Some time afterward he gave me $500 more and again when I was in Ph ladelphia attending the races I met George Handy Smith, who knew how Quay and I stood, and he offered to indorse a note for me, saying that he knew Quay would take care of it. Smith then drew up a note for $500, which he indorsed and I signed. This I got cashed at a bank, and I suppose Quay attended to it, for I have never heard of it since.

"I again succeeded in getting $900, and Quay still owes me a balance of $4,400.

"Handy Smith has been trying to settle this claim, but he cannot get Quay to put up the money.

"Col. Quay is not considered a remarkable man in a fare bank, and if he does not display more judgment in the National Committee affairs the boodle will not be put where it will do the most good.

"The $50,000 willread shares," I gave them will do the most good.

"The $20.000 railroad shares! I gave them up because I could not realize on them."

OARSMAN PILKINGTON'S CHARGES. He Says Goepfert Had a Friend Betting

star hours go by the evidence of Goepfert's guilt seems, in my eyes, to grow stronger. I can produce innumerable witnesses to prove that that fellow said repeatedly that we could not possibly lose the race.

"There is no denying that fact. Now he comes out in a morning paper of yesterday in which he says that I am too old to row and that he never expected to win the contest. I which he says that I am too old to row and that he never expected to win the contest. I wonder what any right-minded oarsman would think of these two statements? I intend to prove, when the proper time arrives, if called upon by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, that all the money that was put out against our chances in that race was iaid by the bosom friend of Goepfert and that Goepfert was the 'capper' for this friend, inasmuch as he went about the hotels of Sunbury trying to get his friends, particularly Bob Culcorn and Billy Oliver, to take up the wagers which this bosom friend made at the ridiculous odds of 100 to 80.

"The suspicions of Oliver were aroused, particularly when he learned that the 'friend' had never seen a boat race and that he knew nothing of the merits of the three crews entered. We were dead favorites on the pools, you see, and the 'friend' had no difficulty in finding willing backers of our chances.

the pools, you see, and the 'friend' had no difficulty in finding willing backers of our chances.

"The morning after all the money was laid and the day after Goepfert had finished second to Psotla, of Cornell College, in the senior single soull race, Goepfert went to the old sawmill in which the majority of the contestants' boats were stored and found his shell with a big hole in the centre.

He appeared surprised, but he made no inquiries as to who had out the craft. He opened my eyes, for by finishing second, Goepfert had the privilege to start in the finals. He returned to the hotel and then he told that he believed Donohue, of Toronto, had out the boat in the interest of his brother, who was entered in the same list with Gopfert. I would not lise n to such an accusation, particularly as I believed that I could lay my hands on the boat cutter if I chose.

"That afternoon I learned that Goepfert had a friend out betting money against our chances. At first I determined to say nothing to him until we got to the starting line, but I reasoned that if I waited until then Goepfert might accidentally fall overboard and my friends' money would be sunk.

"So I then blurted out what I had to say, and I told him that if he entered the bont he would have to pull a square our, or I would pitch him overboard.

The next thing I heard of Mr. Geepfert was to learn from your paper's correspondent at Sunbury that he had run away.

Hundreds of Letters Received by "The Evening World" Urging the Extermination of the System-Twenty-third Street Railroad People Attack the Press-Mr Levy Is Facctions on the Witness Stand.

The bobtail cars must be driven out of this city. Hundreds of letters received daily at THE EVENING WORLD office voice this demand, and thousands of citizens are determined to remove them.

When the officers of the companies have been punished for manslaughter perhaps this end will be accomplished. The inquest into the cause of death of Mrs. Sophia Levy, who was run over by a Twenty-third street bobtail car, near Eighth avenue, on July 10, was continued by Coroner Messemer this morning. There was the usual array of counsel for the corporation whose officials are under the charge of manslaughter in causing the woman's death. Secretary McLean talked loudly and threateningly to THE EVENING WORLD reporter of prosecuting the entire public for conspiracy n the " no-conductor no fare " crusade.

Supt. George Terry, of the Twenty-third Street Railway Company, was the first witness.

It appeared from his evidence that he has no supervision of the drivers of the road nor the despatching of the ears. Secretary McLean, he said, had full charge of these mat-

Mr. Terry said that when an accident occurs on the road it is reported to the office, and a record is kept of all casualties.

The witness took occasion to air his opinion of newspapers in response to a question by Assistant District-Attorney Macdona He thought that they reported many matters which are untrue.

was the reply of facetious Mr. Terry.
Mr. Terry testified that Duffy is still driv-ing one of the juggernaut cars of the Twenty-third street line.
A great deal of time was taken up with this witness in detailing the workings of the cash-box system, which had little or no relevancy to the case.

Secretary Thomas II. McLean, of the Twenty-third Street Bailway Company, testified that he keeps the minute-book of the Board of Directors, employs all drivers and conductors and gives them their instructions. Assistant District-Attorney Macdona doubted that experience of that sort was sufdoubted that experience of that sort was sufficient to qualify a man to drive a bobtail car through a crowded thoroughfare, but the witness said that it did, and that if a man did not qualify after four days' breaking in he payer would Secretary Kunze called early at his office and, finding the door padlocked, he went and finding the door padlocked, he went are renewed to-day.

Duffy, the driver of the car which ran over Mrs. Levy, he said, was employed by him in November, 1887. He came well recommended, having had experience as a driver for a house in East Fortieth street, and has not been laid off since his first employment, excepting during the blizzard.

With reference to the report of the Levy accident Mr. McLean and that Charles E.

accident Mr. McLean said that Charles E. Anderson, driver of car 32, notified him at 3,30 r. M. July 10 and he despatched Mr. Connors, who was present in the office, to look after the case.

"It is Mr. Connors's business to look after these accidents," said the witness. "He has general instructions to investigate every accident, no matter how trivial, and report to the office. He is retained as a lawyer in the interest of the convenue to procure of the content.

the office. He is retained as a lawyer in the interest of the company to procure affidavits and the names of witnesses."

Mr. McLean said that before he went to the scene of the accident he examined car No. 6, which had been brought to the depot, to ascertain if there was any trouble with the brake or other machinery.

A record of all accidents on the road, the witness said, is under his charge.

Lawyer House objected to Mr. McLean's answering a question put to him regarding the number of accidents which have occurred on the Twenty-third street railway system during the past year.

on the Twenty-third street railway system during the past year.

Assistant District-Attorney Macdona insisted on an answer, the Coroner required it to be made, and the witness said that he thought there had been as many as fifty accidents, but he qualified his answers by saying that these accidents were of all characters, to persons and property, and on the Bleecker street line, as well as on the Twenty-third street road.

Coroner Messener directed that the book

Coroner Messener directed that the book be produced for the benefit of the jury.

Col. Dennison said that he was not prepared to say that the railway company will produce the record of accidents and allow a Coroner's jury, which has no right to inquire into any accident excepting where death results, to drag a scoop net through the business of his clients.

Assistant District-Attorney Macdona said that as the company record of the need and "It is necessary to know if this company, which is conducting a perilous railway system, is responsible for this woman's death, and this book can give the jury some light on that subject," insisted Mr. Macdona.

Coroner Messemer here interrupted the debate by saying: "I rule that that book in its entirety must be produced. We are here to ascertain whether this driver or the system is responsible for this woman's death, and that responsible for this woman's death, and that book may assist us materially."

Col. Dennison refused to produce the book until further consultation with the Company's

With regard to his conversation with Driver Duffy at the Twentieth street station-house Mr. McLean said: "I told Duffy to talk with no one about the accident excepting to myself and to Lawyer Connors. Duffy said that he was looking ahead at the time of the accident, that his horse was walking and the car-brake was half set.

"Mrs. Levy, he told me, pitched against the horse back of the collar and fell, and the car had run over her before he could stop it. He told me that he was not making change as the time of the accident. He had been making change at Seventh avenue, where the

The schedule time for the two miles' drive, the witness said, was twenty-two minutes. Justice Massey, of Brooklyn, was a half hour tardy in his arrival at the court-room this morning and he found the chamber

The latter were in holiday attire, and as soon as each bevy entered there was a whispering and a careful survey of the rest of the audience.

Eyes invariably settled finally upon two stalwart specimens of manhood who sat in the rear seat modestly making themselves as small as possible.

Then the girls would gaze eagerly at the young men, the latter would blash, the girls would whisper together and then they would giggle. giggle.

The young men were Jack Burdock and Darby received most attention, for he is one of the Brooklyn boys who doesn't pose as a bridegroom.

Alt of which Darby denied and demanded an immediate hearing. But as Mrs. Jones was not in court the case was set down for Sept. 1. As the alleged theft was committed on Staten Island, it is difficult to see how a Brooklyn court can have jurisdiction, and Darby says the prosecution is malicious, as the complainant in her affidavit avoids naming the place of the theft.

Last fall Burdock incensed Miss Lillie Brown, a seventeen year-old clerk in the stationery store opposite the ball grounds, and she swore out a warrant in December charging that the ball player called her names.

Justice Massey's term of office expires with the year, and the other day he resolved to dispose of all old warrants. The Burdock complaint had never been pushed and the warrant lay unserved. An office arrested Jack Burdock on that old warrant. Both men were paroled on the promise of Manager Byrne to have them in court to-day.

Miss Lillie, too, was missing in court to-day, and Justice Massey set this case down for Sept. 1 also, and both defendants left court, followed by the four or five hundred admirers, male and female, who had gathered in their honor.

Burdock says there is nothing in the charge against him, but will not particularize.

Darby O'Brien says Mrs. Jones kept hig dog for him while he was off with the Mets. She got attached to the pet, and didn't want to give it up. He went after the dog. She refused to let him have her. So he quietly put a string on Beauty's neck and led her away. She was and is his dog.
